- The Model focused on determining the 'core leadership competencies' required for the NSF Team Leader position and then selecting the most suitable candidates based on their observable abilities across the required competencies

Approach to the Selection Process: Using the Assessment Centre/ Competency-Based Model

To establish the Core Competencies for the position, the Consulting Team intensively researched the position, reviewing documentation and meeting with stakeholders to verify the scope of work of the Team Leaders, further to the Job Description.

This process was necessary in light of the fact that the Team Leader is a new position in the Public Service Engaging stakeholders in the ministries/agencies that would receive Team Leaders was a particularly important step to gain insight into the priorities of these agencies and therefore how they would likely assign the new officers.

Approach to the Selection Process: Using the Assessment Centre/ Competency-Based Model

- From both the document study and the stakeholder sessions, the Consulting Team found that the NSF Team Leader would need to have a mix of competencies in three areas:
  - Behavioral/Core Competencies these are competencies related to Leadership, Orientation to Change, Managing Change etc.

Administrative/Managerial Competencies – these are managerial competencies such as planning, organizing, communicating etc.

Selecting Leaders for the Public Service

The Competency Based-Assessment model presents an opportunity for more effective recruiting for key positions in the Public Service, including Leadership

Ousing Multiple Tools, though it can be time consuming, allows candidates to display a wide range of core competencies.

 The tools chosen must be appropriate to the position to be filled

Selecting Leaders for the Public Service

- © Effective, timely, constant communication is essential for the selection process.
  - An important aspect is the orientation for the client and candidate and discussion around the core competencies, the methods for assessing the competencies and the components of the assessment centre.
- Introducing a new approach to selection in the Public Service is a process of change and in that regard must have a change management framework

Selecting Leaders for the Public Service

- Training and Preparation of the Panel is critical for selection of leaders
- The Selection Process must be linked with the overall development plan for Leadership as a critical success factor in implementing the country's National Strategic Development Plan, Vision 2020.
- The Selection must be linked specifically to the Ministerial Performance Framework – C.O.M.E.

Developing the Model for Selection

Notwithstanding the primary purpose of the Selection exercise to select the sever Team Leaders, the research/consulting team were aware of the Ministry's desire to develop a model for selection in the Public Service that would be embraced and used by all.
In this regard, the project emphasized documenting of each phase of the process , creating an archive for future reference.
The team also developed a Guide for Selection from the experience that may be adopted or adapted by the Ministry of Public Administration or by other ministries.
A recognition that leadership recruitment/selection cannot only depend of 'paper qualifications' but just as importantly on evidence the likely competence for the leadership position and a commitment to continuing education and skills development in an environment of uncertainty and intense change

Approach to Selection: Using the Assessment Centre and Competency-based Model as a Tool of Learning

- The Selection Process used a Competency-Based-Assessment Centre Model developed by the Consulting Team.
- The Model focused on determining the 'core competencies' required for the NSF Team Leader position and then selecting the most suitable candidates based on their observable abilities across the required competencies.
